INVESTIGATIVE SURVEYS

of CIA and the National Intelligence System, 1941-1965

Listed below, chronologically and by echelon of authority, are the principal investigations of CIA and its predecessor national-intelligence organizations, from 1941 to date, which were conducted by outside study and review groups at various national policy levels, including the Presidential, NSC, Budget Bureau, interdepartmental, and Congressional levels. This list is preceded by an outline of the major types of internal investigations which were undertaken, either within CIA or within the USIB family under the DCI's leadership, of particular intelligence functions and problems or of the Community's effort as a whole. In each of the entries, the reference to the CIA component involved provides, in effect, an index to the particular registry or committee secretariat where the investigative report was filed and controlled, and where the background papers on a given investigation may also have been filed along with the finished report. For the older periods, the reports and related background files have normally been retired by the controlling component to the CIA Records Center. In exceptional cases, as noted, a copy of the report is on file in the DCI's Historical Staff or (if unclassified) in CIA's main library.

Types of Internal and USIB Studies

Studies Within CIA. Numerous internal investigations and self appraisals have been conducted within CIA from time to time over the past 20 years for a variety of management review and improvement purposes, either independently on CIA's initiative or under the stimulation of higher authority.

Normally these investigative studies were made by one of the established executive-review components, rather than by ad hoc committees, notably the following:

Security Office, 1946-date
Management Staff, up to 1961
Comptroller's office and its predecessors, 1946-63

Office of Budget, Program Analysis, and Manpower
(BPAM), 1963-65
Inspector General, 1952-date
Executive Director-Comptroller, 1962-date
Office of Planning, Programming, and Budgeting, since Oct. 1965

Each of the deputy directorates (DD/S, DD/I, DD/P, and DD/S&T) has also undertaken investigative-type reviews and studies from time to time of particular functions or special operating problems within their jurisdictions.

Task forces for specific inquiries have also been used, notably in recent years, for example to study the U-2 incident, Cuba in 1961 and 1962, and Vietnam.

Studies Within the USIB System. The United States Intelligence Board (1958-date) and its predecessors--the IAB (1946-47), the IAC (1947-58), and the USCIB--have each sponsored a variety of investigative studies, appraisals, and evaluations, some annually and others at random intervals, either of particular national intelligence functions or of the Community-wide foreign intelligence effort as a whole. These investigative studies and reports were all conducted under the DCI's coordinating responsibility, usually on CIA initiative, often with USIB committee mechanisms, and always with CIA staff assistance, and the finished reports were normally coordinated and circulated within the Community, either as USIB-D papers or in specially classified USIB reports. Noteworthy periodic appraisals are the annual overall reports of the DCI (through 1960), and the annual progress reports of several of the standing committees of the USIB and its predecessors, as follows: EIC, SIC, NIS, GMAIC, CODIB, IDC, IPC, CCC, and the former committees on Exchanges, Procurement of Foreign Publications.

Another basic type of periodic investigation, especially on collection and research deficiencies, are the NIE "postmortem" studies, prepared since 1952 by O/NE in consultation with USIB representatives and circulated in the USIB-D-15.2 sub-series.

Ad hoc investigative committees of the USIB have included the Warning Systems Survey, in 1959-61, under the chairmanship of J.J. Hitchcock, NIC; and the Committee on Foreign Intelligence Publications, 1960, chaired by Lyman B. Kirkpatrick, IG.

Finally, over the years since 1957, the DCI as chairman of the USIB has sponsored a succession of special staffs, located in the Director's office, for undertaking a variety of continuing investigations and inspections that relate generally to Community-wide national-intelligence management policy and program evaluation: the Deputy for Coordination (General Truscott); the Coordination Staff ([redacted]); and, since 1963, the NIPE Staff (under Mr. Bross). 25X1
